 - Has been to Long Island, from Bay Area so driven to L.A., Lake Tahoe (4 hour max trips – domestic trips), here at school has driven to NYC, Long Island, Boston (flying), internationally – hasn’t travelled that much but she has been to Italy, Spain, and France
 2. When do you usually travel? Certain times of year? For special occasions?
 - I usually travel for school. That’s a flight
 - Otherwise it’s for special occasions. Italy, LA were for weddings. When she went to Spain and France, that was for a high school trip for language
 3. How long are your trips?
 - Usually max a week and a half for trips
 4. Who do you usually go with? (by self, friends, family, small groups, large groups,)
 - Usually goes with herself (alone) or family or friends.
 - Small groups
 5. What do you look for when deciding a new destination?
 - Expenses
 - Activities (sightseeing and food. Food is the biggest one)
1. What are your goals when traveling? (can be multiple)
 - Usually spend time with friends and family

- Try something new
- Goal is usually to something that a local would do

Do you document your travels? Why or why not?

- Documents travels through photos. But cool to have a travel diary
- Tries to take photos with people in it because that makes it more personal rather than a stock photo
- Other than that, the person with something showing that we're in a new place like the landscape in the background
- Likes documenting trips, but has been trying to not document as much and more just enjoy the trip itself because it's so easy to get wrapped up in taking photos and try to remember but "I realized it's definitely better to just have fun and be in the moment"
- Doesn't do anything with these photos afterwards, looks at them occasionally. Might print a couple that are good
- Challenges: finding the right balance between too much documentation and no documentation at all. I think it'd be cool to do written journals because you're not writing in the moment whereas taking photos is in the moment but journals could be in your hotel room or in the evening. Write down highlights of the day. that seems more special and more valuable.
